[COMMUNICATED. To A. E. H .- A BIRTH DAY WISH. I wish not for thee, much loved friend, Pleasures that soon on earth must end I wish not that thy future state In this world may be rich or great. Far other things I wish for thec.

These are but pride and vanity. I wish that in this world of woe, Thy tears for grief may never flow And the I know this cannot be, Yet it is what I wish for thee; But care will come, and then I pray

Jesus may be thy guard and stay! Oh! may He with the cord of love, Direct thy heart to joys above, For they, and they alone can be, Lasting throughout eternity! And may thy bark, when life is o'er Be safely moor'd on Canaan's shore

I wish for thee a life of peace,

And then a home where sorrows cease, And if the cross thou bearest now, A crown shall then adorn thy brow; And oh! what raptures, none can say, Shall welcome in that blessed day. These are the things I wish for thee, And with them all prosperity; Tho' sorrow comes, thou soon shalt know, That God would not afflict thee so,

Except for good, to make thee love, And long to tread his courts above. But while below, my love to thee, Shall never diminution see: And on this day, especially, Beloved one, I'll think of thee Oh! may this love so sweet below,

In heaven receive a purer glow.

January, 1859. In a western village, a few days ago, a brass band from a neighboring town were invited to attend a lecture and enliven it with their music. The lecture was to be at the meeting house, and at the appointed time the band marched up and proceeded to the gallery. Finding a few ladies and gentlemen occupying the seats below, they immediately struck up Yankee Doodle, a very excellent tune, and excellently played, but singularly inappropriate to the occasion. They had broken in suddenly on the solemnities of a Baptist prayer meeting! The few persons below turned around and viewed the intruders with staring eyes, which the band very innocently took for an expression of admira tion, and they at once struck up the Ameri-
